

TRUST & ESTATE LITIGATION

Disputes can often arise in the administration of a trust or a probate estate, especially when there are substantial amounts of money involved or when family conflict is present. These disputes can arise between beneficiaries, between a trustee or other fiduciary and beneficiaries, or from third parties.

Fraser Stryker Trust and Estate Litigation practice offers clients a dedicated team of lawyers who have navigated high-profile and highly sensitive contested matters involving trusts, estates, and conservatorships.

Trust and estate litigation requires skilled and experienced counsel that can understand and appreciate both the intricate and often complex legal and financial issues involved as well as the delicate and frequently emotional nature of these cases.

Fraser Stryker has the experience and the expertise, and is committed to providing its clients with the highest level of personal service, while maintaining the utmost discretion.

Trusts and estates frequently hold various business interests and other unique assets. As a result, trust and estate litigation can involve a wide range of legal issues. As a full-service law firm, Fraser Stryker has the depth of knowledge and understanding to build the right team to suit any matter, including tax, real estate, corporate, and intellectual property.

Our clients include corporate and individual fiduciaries, individual heirs and beneficiaries, charitable heirs and beneficiaries, estate creditors, estate debtors, guardians, and conservators.

Whether it is probate or civil court, including appeals, our clients benefit from our decades of experience in handling trust and estate litigation matters, in and out of the courtroom.
