foundation in trial advocacy developed during his tenure as a Deputy Douglas County Attorney. In that role, he prosecuted a wide range of criminal matters to include crimes against children, homicides, and white-collar crimes. His extensive courtroom experience now informs his civil practice, where he draws on those skills to craft compelling arguments to effectively represent his clients' interests.

Sean earned his J.D. from Creighton University School of Law, where he was a member of the Moot Court Board, and his B.S.B.A. in Accounting from Creighton University.

Life Outside Law

Outside of the courtroom, Sean fills much of his time wrangling his three young girls and enjoying the occasional quiet moment and good meal with his wife. On rare occasions, he has been known to play a round of golf or attend Creighton Men's basketball games.
