Stephen (Steve) Bruckner's legal practice is concentrated in the field of energy, environmental, and natural resources law.

Serving as lead counsel for a major Midwestern electric utility, his legal experience includes complex environmental cleanup, enforcement, and citizen suit litigation. With extensive experience representing natural gas pipeline and distribution companies, he has zealously litigated rate cases at the commission, trial, and appellate court levels.

In addition to his litigation practice, Steve has handled numerous complex construction and development projects for the energy, environmental, and natural resources sectors, including power plant construction, renewable energy facilities, and purchased power contracts.

Experience

- General Counsel for large electric utility in Nebraska.
- Successful defense of lawsuit challenging client's award of nuclear decommissioning contract.
- Counsel in pending federal court action to recover damages for contamination from ethanol plant.
- Source Gas Distribution (now Black Hills Energy); successful rate case actions, including defending judicial appeals.
- City of Sidney v. Municipal Energy Agency of Nebraska; arbitration and judicial appeal involving wholesale energy contract transmission rate
